

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

d submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

iting your letter, make sure you are aware of comp any policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have wri tten and submitted your letter, follow up with you r supervisor or the appropriate human resource man agement representative to verify approval and comp lete any leave certification documentation that ma y be required.If you need to take an extended peri od of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request t o your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding m edical leave and find out whether or not your empl oyer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appr opriate human resource management representative t o verify approval and complete any leave certifica tion documentation that may be required.If you nee d to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of co mpany policies regarding medical leave and find ou t whether or not your employer is covered under th e Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have w ritten and submitted your letter, follow up with y our supervisor or the appropriate human resource m anagement representative to verify approval and co mplete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended pe riod of time off for work for medical reasons, it' s a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, mak e sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your em ployer is covered under the Family Medical Leave A ct (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your lette appropriate human resource management representat ive to verify approval and complete any leave cert ification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

al Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to o verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons , it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter , make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not yo ur employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate te human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

needed period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

Follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA).

Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sur e you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

t may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

ou have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your e employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA).

Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA).

Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete

ete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered unde r the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the

You have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea t o submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for dea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management

t representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

r or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

ed to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted ed your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.

If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer.

Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer.

Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing you r letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required. If you need to take an extended period of time off for work for medical reasons, it's a good idea to submit a formal letter of request to your employer. Before writing your letter, make sure you are aware of company policies regarding medical leave and find out whether or not your employer is covered). Once you have written and submitted your letter, follow up with your supervisor or the appropriate human resource management representative to verify approval and complete any leave certification documentation that may be required.